So, success strategy tips, and we are up to #10 out of 19. If you have been keeping track, the previous 9, if you haven't seen them, go back and watch them, but we are up to #10, and what does #10 say? Alright, #10 says that you need to...drumroll, wait can I get a drumroll? I got one here: drumroll.

Alright, so success strategy #10, which is, I need you guys to actually take calculated risks. Take calculated risks. So, what does that really mean when I say take calculated risks? Because most people assume that a risk is a bad thing, and risks are not necessarily a bad thing. I think that if you go into any situation blindly and unprepared, then yeah, that is kind of risky. But, if you are prepared, and you're knowledgeable about what you're doing, then that is called a calculated risk.

Alright, so you take calculated risks – that means that you've already done your homework, you've done your research, and you are prepared – at least as best prepared as you possibly can be, for any situation or any outcome that is part of that process, right? So don't be afraid to take risks! You need to take risks in order for you to be successful.

Successful people take risks every day. They do that every day but they take calculated risks because they take their time to plan out what their options are and then they just go for it. Yeah, they go for it. They've gotten advice from people who have already done what they want to do, and they just go for it. They believe in themselves, and they go for it, go for it. You're ok! Go for it! So if you're a singer, if you're an artist, if you like to draw, if you are an architect or engineer or if you...I don't know, make drums, I don't know what you do, but whatever your purpose and your passion is, just go for it! Do it! You already have the talent. Let the world know who you are, what you do and how you do it and share your beautiful self with everybody in the world.

Take calculated risks, and actually go out there and let everybody know what you do. No one is going to know what you do if you don't tell them what you do. Calculated risks. Alright, see you on the other side, almost there!
